

The bionic memory chip

I look forward to a memory chip which can be implanted into the brain so that you can maximise the usage of your brain and out of 100 % usage you can get 150 %. Every time you want to learn something new, you go to your computer, download a file and then upload it onto the chip. So everything we learn can be replaced by just adding a memory chip into the brain which contains all the important information. Wouldn't that be amazing? I mean imagine the world of mathematics. It all could be calculated in the brain. Oh I definitely need that!